Healing Words

Healing residential school survivors, their families & descendants:
AHF funding to community projects

On June 23, 1999, the Aboriginal Healing Foundation announced the next major steps towards healing for those suffering the legacy of physical and sexual abuse in Canadian Residential Schools.

“Our mission is to encourage and support Aboriginal people in building and reinforcing sustainable healing processes. The projects being funded today offer hope and support in communities struggling to bind the wounds arising from the trauma suffered in Residential Schools. The cycle of abuse and dysfunction within families will begin to be broken,” stated Georges Erasmus, Aboriginal Healing Foundation Chairman.

On January 7, 1998, the Hon. Jane Stewart, Minister of Indian Affairs, announced Gathering Strength—Canada's Aboriginal Action Plan, a strategy to begin a process of reconciliation and renewal with Aboriginal people.

A cornerstone of Gathering Strength was the Canadian Government's commitment of $350 million to support community-based healing initiatives for Aboriginal People, on and off reserve, who have been affected by the legacy of physical and sexual abuse that occurred in the residential schools.

The Aboriginal Healing Foundation was formed to manage those funds.

The 35 projects announced in June met the Foundation's first deadline (January 15, 1999) under the themes Community Therapeutic Healing and Developing & Enhancing Aboriginal Capacity.

The types of projects funded under these themes included: sex offender programs; education, counselling, and trauma work; development of Aboriginal-specific materials; training of community members; employee assistance programs; and support for direct therapeutic approaches. Over $20 million has been committed towards these initiatives as of July 30, 1999.

Erasmus said the Board of Directors of the Aboriginal Healing Foundation regretted that all the proposals received could not be funded this time around. Some projects were not approved because they missed the deadline or because they needed more work.

He went on to say, “there's a misperception out there that you can apply for funding once only and that, if you aren’t successful the first time, you don’t get another chance. That is false. We’re helping applicants who were unsuccessful refine their proposals so they can resubmit them in the next round. We will carry out several funding cycles over the life of the Foundation so everyone should have the opportunity to submit a proposal. Deadlines for each call will always be firm. And must be respected.”

AHF has a new logo & a new look

Last year, the Aboriginal Healing Foundation sponsored a national logo contest. We were very impressed with the artwork we received and making our choice was difficult.

We had to choose one design, however, and the Aboriginal Healing Foundation Board of Directors has selected the logo design submitted by Nathalie Coutou, an Abenaki from Quebec.

Ms Coutou was awarded a cash prize of $1,000.00 and a limited edition print, “North American Indian Prison Camp” by George Littlechild.

About the Artist

Nathalie Coutou is Abenaki, which means “People from the East... where the sun rises”, in the language. She was born and raised in St-Alexis de Montcalm a little town of 500 people near Montreal, Quebec.

As a child, she learned to develop her unique ways of expression by observing her father's paintings. From her mother, she learned about self-respect, love and family. Nature, animals and people are part of her and her heritage. Her work illustrates feelings—sometimes sad, other times happy—reflecting everyday life.

Nathalie studied graphic design at the Old Montreal College, where she graduated in 1995. Over the past 8 years, she's designed many logos and paintings for companies, magazines and private collections. Among them:

- The poster for the regional contest, CEGEP en spectacle (1993);
- The illustration for the front page of Pleine Terre magazine (1994);
- The logo for the Sacred Assembly, organized by Elijah Harper (1996);
- An environmental mural for the University of Quebec in Montreal (1996);
- The illustrations and cover artwork for the Aboriginal Student Handbook of Carleton University (1996);
- The logo for Project Reconciliation for Elijah Harper;
- The logo for Aboriginal Tourism Team Canada (1998).

She's also participated in several art exhibitions including:

- The All Nations Talent Show at the Artkore Gallery in Old Montreal (1995);
Highlights from a speech by Georges Erasmus on the occasion of the Foundation’s first funding announcement: Toronto June 23, 1999

Danet:e (Good morning)

Thank you all for coming to spend some time with us today. I am pleased to provide you this update on our activities. You will see that we have been extremely busy over the past year.

I would like, at the outset, to thank all those people who have participated in our work: Survivors, External Merit Review Panel members, Elders, our Board of Directors and, last but certainly not the least, the Staff. They’ve put in long hours and have made things happen despite tight time constraints and the enormity of the workload. On behalf of the Board of Directors, I express our appreciation for all your dedication and hard work.

On January 7, 1998, the Hon. Jane Stewart, Minister of Indian Affairs, announced Gathering Strength—Canada’s Aboriginal Action Plan, a strategy to begin a process of reconciliation and renewal with Aboriginal people. A cornerstone of Gathering Strength was the Canadian Government’s commitment of $350 million to support community-based healing initiatives for Aboriginal People, on and off reserve, who have been affected by the legacy of physical and sexual abuse that occurred in the residential schools.

Our mission is to encourage and support Aboriginal people in building and reinforcing sustainable healing processes that address the legacy of physical and sexual abuse in the residential school system, including intergenerational impacts.

We have four years to spend or commit the money entrusted to us. Survivors have told us to get those funds flowing to the communities as quickly as possible. To date, we have been driven by that need and we have acted accordingly.

Our accomplishments to date:

- Established a 17 member Board of Directors;
- Developed funding proposal criteria based on input from Survivors;
- Prepared for the launch of first Call for Proposals (Program Handbook and other core documents);
- Established a Proposal Development Assistance Fund;
- Held 18 information sessions across the country;
- Completed a funding cycle with a commitment to using the assistance of community-based external reviewers, with funded projects in all regions;
- Organizational development (35+ staff with representation from a broad cross section of Aboriginal nations);
- Developed supporting infrastructure including database systems and funding/financial software;
- Developed key products to support successful applicants (Ethics Guideline & Framework for Project Evaluation);
- We have a new communication and identity program (Newsletter, logo, etc.).

We launched our first Call for Proposals on December 3, 1998. The call was divided into three deadlines: January 15th (Developing & Enhancing Aboriginal Capacity and Community Therapeutic Healing), February 26th (Healing Centres) & March 31st (Restoring Balance & Honour & History).

The information I am giving you this morning is up to date as of Friday June 11, 1999.

The first call:

- 1,066 proposals received in time for all three deadlines;
- Approximately $20 million granted or in progress ($50 million total projected for first call);
- 1,268 requests for Proposal Development Assistance Funding ($1.758 million allocated).

The first deadline (January 15th):

- 370 proposals received in first call for proposals;
- Average budget of approved projects to date: $210 thousand;
- Range of budget of approved projects to date: $19,200 to $1.1 million.

This list continues to grow as I speak. Our staff continue to negotiate and conclude Project Funding Agreements daily. I’d like to point out at this time that we will provide monthly updates on the results of our funding cycle. We will distribute our updates using a number of tools, including our website, which you can find at: www.ahf.ca.

Proposal Assessment Process:

1. Internal administrative assessment;
2. External Merit Review Panel assessment: Regional panels of Survivors, Healers, Elders, professionals & citizens;
3. Programs Committee Review (Board sub-committee) to ensure demographic equity;
4. Final Board approval;
5. Contract negotiation;
6. Project Funding Agreement;
7. Funds flow.

Types of projects funded under first themes only (Developing & Enhancing Aboriginal Capacity & Community Therapeutic Healing):

- Sex offender programs;
- Education, counselling, and trauma work;
- Development of Aboriginal-specific materials;
- Training of community members;
- Employee assistance programs;
- Support for traditional therapeutic approaches.

Administration:

- First audit completed (unqualified opinion);
- First year’s administrative expenditures: $2.521 million (approximately 1/3 on governance/Board, 2/3 on staff & proposal assessment);
- Investment income since funds received in June 1998: $13,502 million (5.1% average rate of return).

Accountability:

- Board of Directors is morally accountable to Survivors & community;
- Board attendance at National Aboriginal Organization annual meetings;
- Annual regional meetings between Board members & the Aboriginal community: 4 meetings scheduled for this fall (Yellowknife on September 30th, Thunder Bay on October 1st, Montreal on October 28th, and Edmonton on November 4th);
- Staff-delivered information sessions across the country;
- Annual reports to Canadian government.

Lessons learned:

- Some have told us our deadlines have been troublesome for them;
- Need to increase staff/applicant interaction, over proposal content, at the outset of the process;
- More targeted financial support for applicants;
- Multi-year vs. limited term funding;
- Targeting high need & under served areas.

The Board of Directors of the Aboriginal Healing Foundation regrets that all the proposals received couldn’t be funded this time around. Some projects weren’t approved because they missed the deadline or because they needed more work.

I would like to take a moment to explain how we are addressing this situation. Applicants whose proposals were returned should not be discouraged.

We have told them we will work with them to refine their proposals so they can resubmit them in the next round.

We will carry out several funding cycles over the life of the Foundation so everyone should have the opportunity to submit a proposal. Applicants who were not successful or missed the first cycle can resubmit their proposals when new calls are made. Deadlines for each call will always be firm.

The near future:

- Next Call for Proposals (fall 1999)
- Revised Program Handbook
- Information/Proposal Development Workshops

We are helping Aboriginal communities help themselves. We do this by providing resources for healing initiatives, promoting awareness of healing issues and needs, and by nurturing a supportive public environment.

We are committed to making strategic investments of the resources entrusted to us. We are determined to contribute to a climate of care, safety, goodwill and understanding for all Aboriginal people. The success of the projects we are funding today, and those we will be funding in the future, will empower individuals, families and communities. That’s why we’re here. The funded projects offer hope and healing in communities struggling to bind the wounds arising from the trauma suffered in the residential school system. They will begin to break the cycle of abuse and dysfunction within families.

This kind of healing is a huge task but today we make a clear statement: It is the desire of Aboriginal peoples to take the lead in casting out the pain from the legacy of Residential Schools that have plagued our lives for far too long.

Masi (Thank you)

CT-411 (Hamlet of Cape Dorset)
Box 50 Cape Dorset, NT X0A 0C0
Contact: Kanayak Salomon (867) 897-8316/8873/8257

Project description: The project is already supporting the healing of some of the women experiencing the effects of physical and sexual abuse suffered in southern institutions during the 50’s and 60’s. This funding will provide ongoing support, allowing more women in the community to heal. In addition, many of the Hamlet’s young boys who attended school during the 1980’s were sexually assaulted. These young men, who are now in their late 20’s and early 30’s, continue to suffer in silent shame. Many of these victims have themselves become offenders, often ending up in the correctional institutions. Some of them have committed suicide. The project plans to involve more men in helping reach the male victims of sexual abuse.

AHF funding for community projects

The Foundation has four years to spend or commit the money and wants to get it flowing through the communities as quickly as possible. Mike DeGagné, the Foundation’s Executive Director, spoke about some of the challenges facing staff of the Foundation.

“One challenge for us is managing peoples’ expectations. We’ve gotten calls from some people two days after they submitted a proposal asking for their money. Our evaluation and approval process is an involved one. Each proposal is evaluated on how well it will address the legacy of physical and sexual abuse arising from the residential school system, including intergenerational impacts. There are many factors to be considered in approving funds for a particular project and that takes time. We’re currently looking at a turnaround time of about eight months (from receipt of proposal to cutting a cheque).”

“Another major challenge is that people are not clear about what we do as a Foundation. We’re not here to provide healing services, or to pay out compensation to residential school Survivors. We’re not a slush fund to top off, or replace, programs that are available through Indian Affairs, Health Canada or any other Canadian government department. Our mandate is to provide funding for healing projects, based on good proposals, that will address the legacy of physical and sexual abuse arising from the residential school system, including intergenerational impacts,” concluded Mr. DeGagné.

In closing, Mr. Erasmus added, “we are helping Aboriginal communities help themselves. We do this by providing resources for healing initiatives, promoting awareness of healing issues and needs, and by nurturing a supportive public environment. The success of the projects we are funding today, and those we will be funding in the future, will empower individuals, families and communities. That’s why we’re here.”

“We are committed to continuing to find more effective and efficient ways to conduct our work for the benefit of Aboriginal communities. Over the year ahead we will be making changes that will help us to best assist Survivors and their communities, in fulfillment of the mandate entrusted to us. We hope, as a result, to become even better at meeting the needs of Survivors, their families and descendants.

Some of our plans for the future are outlined below:

The Funding Process
A refined Community Support process will be unveiled at the launch of our next call for proposals. This process will provide more intensive staff & professional reviews of each proposal before it goes to the External Merit Review phase of the process. This is intended to assist applicants in ensuring that their applications are complete and meet mandatory criteria.

Funding Cycles
Several funding cycles will be held over the life of the Foundation so everyone should have the opportunity to submit a proposal. Applicants who were not successful or missed the first cycle can resubmit their proposals when new calls are made. Deadlines for each call will always be firm and clearly publicized.

Proposal Development Workshops
Proposal Development Workshops, open to anyone interested in preparing and submitting a proposal will be held in all regions to provide information and help to applicants. The full schedule will be publicized once it has been finalized.

Revised Program Handbook
In the near future we will be releasing a revised Program Handbook which has been updated to reflect changes to the Funding Process. The revised Program Handbook will be released at the time of our next call for proposals later this year.

Integrated Communications Strategy
An Integrated Communications Strategy has been developed and should be approved and in place by late 1999.

Consultations
Four meetings are currently scheduled for the remainder of 1999. They will be held in: Yellowknife on September 30th, Thunder Bay on October 14th, Montreal on October 28th, and Edmonton on November 4th.

A third-year student working toward a degree in Native Studies at the University of Alberta, Ms. Swanson is a Métis living in Edmonton. She was appointed as a provincial member of the Métis National Youth Advisory Council, and has participated with Métis and First Nations communities in a variety of capacities, but foremost with Métis and First Nations youth initiatives and organizations. She has conducted research into the Residential School syndrome.

Charles Weaselhead
A member of the Blood Tribe First Nation in Standoff, Alberta, Mr. Weaselhead is a health administrator with a 2-year Certificate in Health Care Administration. He served as Director of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Treatment for eight years, and has been involved in health administration for a total of 15 years. He has been active in Aboriginal community issues and initiatives for the past two decades, and pursues an active interest in individual and community healing processes, in particular traditional and cultural methods. He is particularly interested in dealing with the negative cycles of abuse for children and in providing a safety net for victims and others affected.

Directors of the Aboriginal Healing Foundation will travel to various regions of the country in order to meet with Survivors, their families and descendants directly.

Directors will:
❖ Report on the Foundation’s activities during its first year of operation;
❖ Provide an update on funded projects;
❖ Provide an overview of new initiatives;
❖ Provide an opportunity for dialogue and feedback.

PLEASE NOTE: Participants may attend any gathering of their choice and must cover their own travel costs. The Foundation will provide refreshments and a light lunch.

For more information, please contact Natasha Martin
(613) 237-4441
or toll-free at (888) 725-8886, Ext. 241.

A word from the Editor...

She:kon (Greetings):
I realize it’s been awhile since we’ve put out a newsletter and I apologize for the delay in getting this edition out to you. We’ve been extremely busy since I joined the Foundation but you can look forward to getting news and updates on a regular basis. We hope you like the new format. While this edition is meant to be informative, we are planning to make future editions more project and issue-focused.

We will soon be establishing an Editorial Board and policy to govern the publication of this newsletter. Once done, we will be able to provide space for you to tell your stories.

Please contact me if you have any comments or suggestions about this newsletter. Stay tuned for more...
